

Max and Hilde Kochmann Summer School for PhD Students in European-Jewish History and Culture 2023, University of Sussex (Brighton, UK) 9–12 July 2023

The Sussex Weidenfeld Institute of Jewish Studies at the University of Sussex (<https://www.sussex.ac.uk/research/centres/jewish-studies/>) in cooperation with the Center for Jewish Studies of the Karl-Franzens-Universität Graz invite applications for the biennial Max and Hilde Kochmann Summer School for PhD students in European-Jewish History and Culture 2021.

The Summer School brings together young researchers who are currently working on topics in Jewish history and culture, giving them the opportunity to present and discuss their projects in an informal and friendly atmosphere with leading scholars in the field. The Kochmann Summer School continues the tradition of previous events, creating an interdisciplinary network of younger scholars engaged in areas of European-Jewish studies, Thought and Culture from the early modern periods to the present day. This year we will particularly encourage scholars working in the area of digital humanities and Holocaust commemoration to apply.

Applicants must be PhD students at the time the summer school starts.

Candidates are invited to send, via email, a 500-word proposal outlining their PhD project, a short CV and one reference from their supervisor or relevant scholar in the field. Applications must be in English and sent as one PDF document to:

Kate Marrison: K.Marrison@sussex.ac.uk

For further information or queries, please contact:

Gideon Reuveni: g.reuveni@sussex.ac.uk

Victoria Walden: V.Walden@sussex.ac.uk

The Sussex Weidenfeld Institute will offer a travel allowance of up to £300 for candidates coming from Europe. Candidates from Israel, the United States and other non-European countries will be considered but may be asked to contribute towards their travel costs. Accommodation cost will be covered for all students.

Application deadline: 27 March 2023